Huntsman withdraws efforts

y DOUG GIBSON
niverse Staff Writer

Republican gubernatorial fronunner Jon Huntsman surprised ate political leaders by unexpectlly withdrawing his candidacy ednesday morning.

The announcement was made in a lt Lake City news conference at untsman Chemical Corporation's ain office.

"Building the community and ringing jobs to Utah are more impornt than being governor," explained untsman, whose withdrawal from e race almost assures Gov. Norman angerter's re-nomination.

Huntsman's announcement was a rprise since as late as Tuesday ght "Huntsman for Governor" comercials were airing on Wasatch ront television stations. Also, a poll Utah Republicans published in unday's Salt Lake Tribune had the dustrialist leading Bangerter by ght percentage points.

Huntsman announced his withawal at Huntsman Chemical Corpotion's main office in Salt Lake City. ith Bangerter at his side, Huntsan said he never envisioned a fragented race and the Republican rty could not afford a divisive race.

a thinly-veiled message to former epublican-turned-Independent canlate Merrill Cook, he urged Repubans running as Independents to rern to the party.

Huntsman thanked all his supports for their efforts and said, "my rong position in the public polls has en most humbling." He reiterated s commitment to lower taxes and luted schoolteachers "for the emendous job they've done with ry limited resources."

Huntsman pledged his support for angerter and urged all Utahns to do e same. "From this day forward I will work to unite our party, and to do all I can to reelect Gov. Norman Bangerter," said Huntsman.

Huntsman's pledge to make every effort possible to assist in bringing new businesses and jobs to Utah took on more weight when Bangerter said that "Huntsman will become a very real part of this administration in the economic development ... he will occupy a position ... of no less than senior adviser in the economic area."

Bangerter admitted that he lacked Huntsman's expertise in business matters, but said his capabilities in government teamed with Huntsman's business knowledge would benefit the state. "Jon and I look forward to becoming a strong team for the economic development of Utah," he said.

The governor invited all Huntsman supporters to join his campaign and promised to build a strong coalition, assuring them "they have nothing to fear from Norm Bangerter."

Cook, who was contacted after the announcement, said he was surprised by Huntsman's withdrawal and he respected the industrialist as an outstanding individual. "I accept completely his reasons for leaving," said Cook.

However, Cook disputed Huntsman's urge that he withdraw his Independent candidacy. "As far as his announcement being a kind of signal to me, while I respect his recommendation, I feel very strongly that only through my Independent candidacy can Utah elect a governor that can do what is needed in the state."

State Republican Party Chairman Craig Moody said he was "completely surprised" when he received a call from the Huntsman campaign early Wednesday morning informing him of the withdrawal. "I had no indication this would happen. It was completely his (Huntsman's) idea."

"The Utah Republican party will expend all energies that the governor is returned to office," said Moody.

The chairman supports Huntsman's call for a unified Republican Party and criticized Cook for leaving the party. "The Republican Party didn't abandon Merrill Cook, Merrill Cook abandoned the Republican Party," said Moody. Utah Senator Jake Garn, who is Bangerter's campaign chairman, praised Huntsman for his decision.

"I think Jon Huntsman proved once again he is a remarkable man. He has placed the interests of his family, state and the public above his personal interests."

Algerians claim talks hurt by 'intransigence'

Kuwaiti defense minister flies to Algiers; remains inflexible to hijackers' demands

Associated Press

ALGIERS, Algeria — An Algerian official said Wednesday that Kuwait's "intransigence" had created a deadlock in negotiations with Shiite Moslem hijackers for the release of 32 hostages on a Kuwaiti jumbo jet.

Food and water were taken in the afternoon to the blue-and-white Boeing 747, which the hijackers call the "plane of martyrdom." It baked under the North African sun on an isolated patch of tarmac at Houari Boumedienne airport.

A delegation from Kuwait arrived Wednesday afternoon to help in efforts to free the remaining hostages and the plane, which was hijacked April 5 on a flight from Bangkok to Kuwait with 112 people aboard.

It spent three days on the ground in Mashhad, Iran, flew to Cyprus on Friday and arrived here early Wednesday.

The six to eight gunmen, who have killed two passengers, demand that Kuwait free 17 pro-Iranian extremists convicted in the 1983 bombings of the U.S. and French embassies there. The hostages included three members of the Kuwaiti royal family.

Sheik Nawaf al-Ahmed al-Sabah, Kuwait's defense Minister, affirmed Wednesday his country's "unwavering and principled stance of rejecting blackmail," the Persian Gulf sheikdom's official news agency KUNA reported. "We would not change our attitude."

A ranking Algerian official told The Associated Press privately: "If they merely wanted to restate their known position, there was no need for them to send their high-level delegation to Algiers." He said "the intransigence" of Kuwait had stalled negotiations.

His remarks appeared to confirm unofficial reports that Algeria was pressing Kuwait for more flexibility.

The jet left Larnaca, Cyprus, early Wednesday after 12 more hostages were released. They arrived Wednesday night in Kuwait and were met by the interior minister, Sheik Salem Sabah al-Sabah.

On the same Boeing 727 to Kuwait were the bodies of the two slain passengers, their coffins drapped in the red, black, green and white Kuwaiti flag.

Fifty-seven other hostages were freed at Mashhad, a city in northeastern Iran. Passengers released Tuesday said one gunman boarded the plane at Massad and the hijackers got a new supply of weapons there.

Mohammed Saud al-Osaimi, a Kuwaiti deputy foreign minister, led the nine-member delegation to Algiers.

He told reporters "I hope this will be the last stage of the voyage," but the Kuwait daily Al Watan quoted Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, as saying: "I don't think this operation will come to an end in Algiers."

The PLO has been involved in negotiations with the hijackers.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said: "We had repeatedly indicated that we believed the plane should be kept on Cyprus and we regret the decision to allow it to leave."

The new president of Utah Valley ommunity College was named ednesday morning by the chairman the state Board of Regents.

Kerry D. Romesburg, 43, a leader Alaska's higher education system, ll assume his presidency in midly.

Regent chairman W. Eugene ansen made the announcement and id the board felt privileged to have awn Romesburg to Utah. "Dr. omesburg has earned the respect of s peers regionally and nationally beuse of his leadership and vision," ansen said.

Romesburg said the relationship tween a college and the community serves is important. "It must strike a critical balance in serving the vocational-technical training needs of students at the same time it provides general education classes for those students who want to transfer to a four-year institution. One of these roles cannot suffer at the expense of the other," Romesburg said.

"I am very impressed by the partnership UVCC has established with the community and the state," said Romesburg. "A community college must respond to community needs.

Romesburg began his educational career in 1967 by teaching math in Arizona. He has kept a teaching assignment whenever he could since then and currently teaches college math in Alaska. Once he settles into the presidency, he hopes to teach at UVCC.

"Interacting with students in the classroom is the best way to get your finger on the pulse of what's happening on campus. It's a way of taking measure of whether students' needs are being met and what can be done to serve them better," Romesburg said.

Romesburg has been the executive director of the Alaska Commission on Post-Secondary Education for the past 12 years. He has coordinated the state's 10 community colleges, three universities, three private colleges, three public vocational-technical schools and various private vocational colleges.

"Over and over again I have seen him emerge as a leader on critical issues that face our campuses," said W. Rolfe Kerr, Utah Commissioner of Higher Education. Kerr has worked with Romesburg in regional and national settings.

Agent testifies in Singer-Swapp trial

By MICHELLE MELENDEZ
Senior Reporter

Despite objections by defense attorneys Wednesday, a federal agent identified 23 weapons he found on the Singer property after the Jan. 28 seige.

On the second day of testimony in the Singer-Swapp trial, Lawrence Meadows, special agent for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, identified each weapon as it was brought into the courtroom.

The weapons consisted of rifles, shotguns, revolvers and a semi-automatic Colt pistol owned by slain polygamist leader John Singer, and found on him at the time he was killed nine years ago.

Meadows said he found 8,304 rounds of ammunition during an inspection of the Singer property after the six adult family members were arrested.

He also testified to finding ammunition and fish hooks inside a vest worn by Addam Swapp. Swapp's clothes were confiscated when he was taken to the hospital after being shot in the siege.

Eleven of the 23 weapons were found in John Timothy Singer's bedroom lying on and underneath a "heavy wooden table," in the third dresser drawer and against a window bench.

A rifle and revolver were discovered lying in the snow outside of Singer's bedroom window, said Meadows. Other weapons were found in the living room leaning next to windows, and in Heidi Singer Swapp's home.

Most of Wednesday afternoon's testimony was directed at determining if the Kamas Stake Center of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is a place of interstate commerce. If it is determined the stake center is not involved in interstate commerce, the federal court might not have jurisdiction over the bombing charges. U.S. Attorney Brent Ward called various LDS ecclesiastical leaders to the stand including Robert Rydalch, president of the Kamas Utah Stake; Paul Woolstenhuln, bishop of the Oakley ward and Lambert Lewis, bishop of the Rhodes Valley ward.

These two wards met in the Kamas Stake Center for weekly church worship until the Jan. 16 bombing.

Witnesses discussed their responsibilities in their positions as they pertained to donations made by ward members.

Such donations include tithing, fast offering, budget contributions for buildings and activities and a fund for missionaries currently serving for the Church.

Funds are channeled through the bishop's office, deposited in a local bank and electronically transferred to the general Church fund, said Rydalch.

A small group of people demonstrated outside of the courthouse, and expressed concern that Vickie Singer would not get a fair trial.

Youth describes his occult involvement; doesn't think evil is different from good

By DAWN LARSEN
and PATRICK MCKNIGHT
Senior Reporters

Editor's note: This is the third of a series on the misconceptions and dangers involving the occult in Utah County. This interview was conducted with a 17-year-old Provo youth who is currently involved in a local Satanic cult. He asked that his name be withheld.

Question: When did you first become interested in the occult?

Answer: When I was about six I was just fascinated with it. I started doing reports on it and stuff ... finding out the different types of occult.

Q: When was your first actual encounter with Satanism?

A: My first encounter was when I was about nine. Me and some friends kind of snuck into a ritual and it wasn't one of the best ones. They sacrificed pigs, goats, lambs — just whatever they could get their hands on.

Q: Do you believe in sacrificing animals?

A: No I don't. I don't see what good comes out of killing something that has just as much right to live as I do.

Q: Is anyone in your family into the occult?

A: No one else in my family is into it except for my grandmother, who is into white. But I'm the only one I know of who is into black.

Q: What's the difference between white and black?

A: White is supposed to be pure and good, and black is supposed to be really bad.

Q: Have you ever experimented with a Ouija board?

A: Yeah — and I've seen some pretty weird stuff. My friend got a Ouija board from his great grandpa and we did it in my house downstairs, and something got a hold of my grandma and she weighed pretty close to 280 pounds — she was real heavy set. It wrapped a blanket around her feet, picked her up and threw her on the bed and set her back down. Then it went through my whole room and just trashed it real bad and the next morning I found '666' written on my wall.

Q: What do you think it was?

A: It was probably just a spirit. You really can't contact Satan. It's just like trying to contact God and having him talk to you — one in a million chances.

Q: Have you ever tried to contact God?

A: I have asked for help from God and nothing ever happened. He's never answered me. I went to church and I got baptized (into The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints) and it just didn't work out. It didn't feel right to me.

Q: Have you asked for help from Satan?

A: Yeah, it worked.

Q: What did you ask him for help in?

A: I needed help coping with society so I wouldn't lose it and blow my brains out and he helped mellow me out.

Q: Do you see Satan as being evil?

A: Well, if you can define evil ... I just kind of like to think of good and evil as the same.

Q: Do you believe Satan is a real being or does he represent a power?

A: Just a power.

Q: What kinds of things does your Satanic group do when they get together?

A: We meet once a week on Saturday nights, if everyone can make it. There are 13 in our group because that's all that's allowed. Sometimes you can bring a guest if everyone in the group agrees to it.

It's just like a regular church where you go in and preach to Satan instead of God. There is actually no difference, except we have a different Bible. Basically we just read out of Satan's Bible ... it's about like a normal church. I just go up there every once in awhile and say hi to everyone and have a coke.

Q: They serve refreshments?

A: Yeah, if you're 21 they'll let you drink, but if you're not, you stick with Pepsi, Coke or Sprite. They are really strict about that.

Q: Are there a lot of drugs used in Satanic rituals?

A: No, not really. I don't take drugs. I've tried them before — I think every teen-ager has.

Avoid the occult, warns professor

By PATRICK MCKNIGHT
Senior Reporter

Editor's note: This is the fourth of a series on the misconceptions and dangers involving the occult in Utah County.

As many teen-agers explore Satan worship and the occult, a BYU religion professor says people should stay away from any powers that do not represent teachings of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, including seances and Ouija boards.

LaMar Garrard, a professor of Church History and Doctrine, said people are inviting evil power into their lives by playing with the supernatural. "I think (they) are hurting (themselves) by getting involved in the occult ... as they mess with the Ouija board, pretty soon they are controlled by an outside force."

Garrard wrote his master's thesis in 1954 on the powers of Satan. Garrard interviewed people who had encountered evil spirits and attributed some of the spirit activity to playing with Ouija boards. He said one man had evil spirits in his house, then confessed he had used a Ouija board to determine where to tract while serving an LDS mission.

According to Garrard, the devil has only as much power as people permit him. He said the moment someone revolts at anything which comes from God, the devil takes power. "He has no power over you until you do something which gives him the power over you."

Personal revelation is the best way to discern whether or not a power is good or evil, Garrard said. And though some claim to have prayed to God with no answer, Garrard says many times people aren't worthy to receive answers. Playing with the occult and Satan worship would likely make one ineligible for God's help, he said. "I think when you're messing with the devil, you start to get in league with him. You're doing something that's wrong in the first place." Sec. 101 of the Doctrine and Covenants says if one is slow to hearken unto the voice of the Lord, the Lord is slow to hearken unto their prayers.

"In other words, if you disobey God in one way or another, then Satan gets a certain power over you." God is not obligated, nor will he talk to someone under those circumstances.

There are warning signs that help recognize Satan's deceptions, Garrard said. The first is anyone who claims to represent Satan or uses his name, even innocently. The second is any teaching that emphasizes giving into the passions of the flesh. "It's un-Christlike," he said.

Garrard strongly urges all to stay away from Satanism and the occult. "Avoid the appearance of evil. Some may be innocent, I don't know. But some could be deadly."

Reagan says he was ignorant of quotes

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said Wednesday he did not learn until recently that his former spokesman, Larry Speakes, had put words in his mouth on at least two occasions while briefing reporters on presidential meetings.

Reagan did not directly answer, however, when asked whether he approved of the practice or would allow it to continue. His current spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, has condemned any such procedure and said he never would do it.

Speakes says in his new book, "Speaking Out," that he once attributed remarks made by Secretary of State George P. Shultz to the president and once collaborated with an aide in making up quotes which he then credited to Reagan.

Reagan's first comment on the book came in a question-and-answer session after a speech to the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Katherine Fanning, editor of the Christian Science Monitor and president of the editors' group, asked Reagan, "Did you approve of that process, and would you continue to allow that to happen in your White House?"

"I was not aware of that and just learned it recently," the president responded, "as all the rest of you did. And I can tell you right now that I have no affection for these kiss-and-tell books that are being written, and I find it entirely fiction." Speakes, in an interview on Tuesday, said, "I generally told him what I had done and the reasons for doing it."

Soviet businessmen visit Madison Ave.

MOSCOW — Soviet businessmen got a cram course in Madison Avenue advertising, complete with Diet Coke commercials and reminders that the "customer is king," as an annual meeting of U.S. and Soviet business leaders opened Tuesday.

The 11th yearly session of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council, which works to foster commercial ties between the superpowers, comes at a time when the Soviets are actively courting foreign capital and expertise to rejuvenate their stagnant state-run economy.

However, the notorious bad quality and limited range of Soviet goods has hindered many firms and trade organizations from selling abroad, despite exhortations from Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev to increase exports.

"Soviet organizations should expect to meet a large amount of skepticism as they enter the American market," said James H. Dowling, president of Burson-Marsteller, a U.S. public relations firm.

State of emergency lifted in Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — The government on Wednesday lifted a state of emergency aimed at quelling anti-American violence, but two schools where the protests broke out remained closed and guarded by troops.

The emergency was imposed after 2,000 protesters enraged over the forced extradition of a suspected drug baron to the United States burned the U.S. Consulate and U.S. Information Service office on April 7.

"The causes for which the situation was decreed have disappeared and normality has returned," presidential spokesman Lisandro Quesada told reporters.

He said President Jose Azcona Hoyo had gotten no further death threats since the weekend, when he received three. "Nevertheless, we are continuing with an investigation to identify these people" who made the telephoned threats.

Quesada said full constitutional guarantees were restored at 6 a.m. Wednesday in Tegucigalpa and San Pedro Sula, 125 miles to the north. The decree was imposed Friday on the cities, the largest in the country. Business, commerce and transportation were operating normally Wednesday.

Troops kill 3 guerrillas entering Israel

JERUSALEM — Troops killed three Arab guerrillas trying to enter Israel from Lebanon on Wednesday and a 70-year-old Palestinian woman was suffocated by tear gas tossed into her home by soldiers, according to army and other reports.

Two Palestinians were reported wounded by gunfire and 51 injured by rubber bullets, tear gas and beatings in a battle between Palestinians and Israeli soldiers in the Gaza Strip.

At least 144 Palestinians have died in the rebellion that began Dec. 8 in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, according to U.N. figures. An Israeli soldier and a 15-year-old Jewish settler also have been killed.

Arabs attacked Arab merchants who defied Palestine Liberation Organization orders to close, firebombing the shop of a Jerusalem moneychanger and setting stalls ablaze in the Bethlehem produce market, reported police and witnesses.

Sunrider to seek domestic soy supplier

OREM — Sunrider Corp. has agreed to the Utah Department of Agriculture's recommendation that it switch to a domestic source of raw soy for use in Sunrider food products.

However, Sunrider spokesman Michael Clapier said finding an American soy supplier won't be easy. "We've contacted 10 suppliers so far, and no one can give us what we need," he said.

State agriculture officials closed Sunrider's Orem plant March 14 after finding a third case of salmonella bacteria contamination since the it began operation Feb. 1. The cease-and-desist order still is in effect.

Sunrider built the new facility after contamination was found in its previous plant.

"We weren't sure what the problem was at first, so we hired a specialist to design a new plant. It turned out the problem was the raw soy we imported (from Taiwan)," Clapier said.

"Other products don't have the problem because they use soy that has been heated. The bacteria is killed, but some of the nutrients are destroyed too. We use raw soy to keep the full nutritional value in our product. We want to use a whole food," he said.

YOUTH

Q: So at your rituals you don't drop acid or anything?

A: No, I think that's stupid because you just kill your brain.

Q: Do they wear robes at the rituals you attend?

A: Yeah, they do. The high priest wears a black one with a red velvet necklace and an upside-down cross and the rest just wear white robes.

Q: Do you think music and Satanism are related?

A: I think it is, but I don't think if you listen to certain kinds of music it definitely means you're into Satanism.

I listen to a mixture of new wave and heavy metal, but I also listen to FM 100 (easy listening) once in awhile when I want to relax.

Q: Do you go to a lot of concerts?

A: No. I don't like to go to those, especially the heavy metal ones because of all of the smoke and stuff.

Q: So you don't smoke pot?

A: No. I was into it for about a month but my grades dropped really low and I said to myself, 'Hey, this is just getting me stupid.'

Q: What are your plans after you graduate from high school?

A: Probably attend college.

Q: BYU?

A: No, I really don't think so.

Q: What kind of power do you have?

A: Nothing too spectacular. I can take a life if I wanted to.

Also, sometimes if I concentrate real hard I can change the forms of some things, like bend mirrors and tie things in knots.

I could get more power if I really wanted to but I just don't think I'm ready. I need to learn more about what I'm getting into. I have been asked to be the high priest.

Q: What does it take to be a high priest?

A: It's someone who was chosen by Satan before they were born. They are usually the most powerful person in the group.

Q: Do you want to work up to being the high priest?

A: I'm debating right now if I want that or if I want to remain neutral.

Q: So do you have doubts about Satanism?

A: I just have doubts about what I want to become.

Q: Does your family know that you go to these rituals?

A: No.

Q: What would they do if they found out?

A: They'd kill me. That would be it — out of the house ...

Q: Is Satanism prevalent around here?

A: I used to live over in Pleasant Grove and that was the main place for it.

Then my family packed up and moved to Springville and then Springville became the main place.

If it moves over to Provo real heavily now, then I don't know what I'm going to do.

It seems to be following me — and I don't want it to.

Q: Are you trying to get away from it?

A: Well I don't want to be into it as heavily as they want me to be.

Q: Do you believe in selling souls?

A: Oh, you can, but I haven't. I did see a person that has though. It was really bizarre. He was in a trance for three hours and when he came out of it he was a different person — a different voice, different acting ... but he had all this knowledge.

It's like starting a new life and having recall of your previous life. He was really weird.

Q: Why do people sell their souls?

A: To gain knowledge and power.

Q: Do you ever plan on selling your soul?

A: No, not really. I kind of don't believe I have one to sell.

Q: What do you think is going to happen after you die? Do you believe there is a heaven and a hell?

A: No.

Q: So then you're not worried about going to hell for being a Satan worshipper?

A: No ... and if I'm wrong, then it was my mistake.

Pregnancy rumors untrue, says Caroline

MIAMI — Princess Caroline of Monaco doused speculation she is again pregnant Wednesday and said her support of ballet companies is something her famous mother would be doing if she were still alive.

The princess held court with the news media in her two-story presidential suite atop the Hotel Inter-Continental. She is in Miami for a fund-raising gala supporting ballet companies here and in Monaco.

When a reporter asked whether she was pregnant again, she said: "Not that I know of."

SALT LAKE CITY — Richard nelgrove announced his candidacy Vednesday for the Republican nomiation to Utah's 2nd Congressional istrict, challenging first term inumbent Wayne Owens, D-Utah.

Snelgrove, 33, co-owner and manger of the Snelgrove Ice Cream ompany, told a crowd of approxiately 150 people that his campaign about jobs, opportunity, economic evelopment and no tax increases.

The Salt Lake native said that for e first time in Utah's history, peole are leaving the state to find work lsewhere, because the opportunities re not here. "And at the same time e have our current Congressman ying all over the world, presenting ills that have nothing to do with the alt Lake valley, our jobs, our children and our futures. I want to change that," he said. Snelgrove produced a cut out cardboard figure of Owens and told the crowd that his opponent is actually two people: "The 'nice guy, Salt Lake Wayne' who we see every now and then — who tells us one thing, ... and the 'Washington out-of-step Mr. Owens.' This guy doesn't vote the same as this guy talks. He tells Utah one thing and votes another," he said.

Snelgrove pledged to provide leadership and work for new jobs and growth. "In Washington I will act as your ambassador to coordinate this effort." He also said he will not increase taxes. "We see taxes raised to the point that discourages economic growth and investment ... I will not raise your taxes — period," he said.

Although he has never been elected to a public office, Snelgrove has given many years of service to the Republican Party, and its candidates on a local, state and federal level. He was Director for Volunteers for George Bush in 1980, and a delegate to the National Convention in 1984 for President Reagan. In 1985 he was elected as Vice Chairman of the Salt Lake County Republicans, and in 1986 elected Chairman. In addition to his duties as Chairman, Snelgrove serves on the State Executive and Central Committees.

In addition to Snelgrove's business experience with his ice cream company, he also is a member of the Salt Lake Chambers of Commerce, Utah Manufacturers Association, Utah Taxpayers Association, Utah Foundation, the National Federation of Independent Business, Rotary International and a former member of Pi Kappa Alpha.

Snelgrove is married and is the father of three children.

Orem man raises money atop roof; funds to help child abuse victims

y LAURA F. JONES
niverse Staff Writer

In an effort to raise $15,000 for abused children in Utah ounty, an Orem man is spending 95 hours watching ideos on the roof of a Provo restaurant.

Dana Robinson is asking that Utah County residents onate 95 cents — a penny for each hour he stays awake — the Utah County Division of Social Services. The oney will be used to help victims of child abuse in the ounty.

To keep himself awake until he comes down at 8:30 aturday morning, Robinson said he is watching and takg notes on science fiction movies. He estimated that he ill watch 58 during his vigil. Robinson approached the cal restaurant, located on 1460 North State St. in Provo, ith the idea for the movie vigil about three weeks ago. erry Shaw, owner of the restaurant, liked the idea and obinson began the marathon at 8 a.m. Tuesday.

Other Provo businesses have donated movies, food and drink, a chair, material to build the glass and wood box Robinson is sitting in and a lift to allow people to visit Robinson on the roof.

"My philosophy in life has always been that life is a song and love is the music and all I'm trying to do here is to write a few decent measures," Robinson said.

Though he has never been a victim of child abuse himself, Robinson said he had a friend who was abused, and it took her years to put her life back together.

"There's an unbelievable amount of child abuse going on in Utah County now," Robinson said, adding that physical beating is only one type of abuse. Emotional and sexual abuse is also prevalent.

Robinson said part of the money he raises will go to help abusive parents overcome their problem.

The restaurant is donating 25 cents for every shake or ice cream cone purchased there until June 1.

Other donations may be made at the restaurant or can be sent to the Division of Social Services c/o Protective Services, P.O. Box 1464, Provo, UT 84601.

Eastern Airlines penalized for violations

ssociated Press

WASHINGTON — The federal overnment announced a special inestigation of Texas Air Corp. Vednesday to determine whether the ation's largest airline company and s management are "fit, willing and ble" to carry commercial air traffic.

The investigation by the Transortation Department came as the ederal Aviation Administration anounced a civil penalty of $823,000 gainst Eastern Airlines, a Texas Air ubsidiary, because of "recurring ends" of violations of safety regulaons. Transportation Secretary ames Burnley said at a news confernce the investigation of Texas Air orp. will be completed within 30 days and is being conducted to determine whether the company is complying with federal regulations and whether its management is competent to operate commercial aircraft. Burnley said that one reason for the investigation is the FAA's fine against Eastern, which came just over a year after Eastern agreed to pay a $9.5 million fine in connection with other safety violations.

He said the investigation would include an in-depth review of Texas Air's financial situation and the circumstances surrounding its purchase of Eastern, which has been embroiled in almost continuous labor disputes for years. Burnley said the department's concern was increased by a series of court decisions that have prevented Texas Air from moving a number of Eastern's operations, including its profitable northeast shuttle, into a separate subsidiary. Texas Air is the parent company for Eastern and Continental Airlines. These two carriers account for nearly 20 percent of the commercial airline market.

Nelson, 33, is charged with nine ounts of aggravated sexual assault d four of aggravated burglary in gden. In Cedar City, Iron County ttorney Scott Burns has filed a total 11 felony counts, charging rape, urglary, and theft of a firearm.

Nelson remains in Weber County Jail in lieu of $140,000 bail.

Nelson was arrested April 2, a mile away from a central Ogden home where a woman reported she was raped an hour before the arrest.

He is charged in that early-morning attack and rape of three other Ogden women in their homes March 7, 11, and 15.

Ogden Detective Sgt. Marlin Balls said an assailant used the same method in each of the assaults. A man entered the homes of women, threatened them with a knife and sexually assaulted or abused them.

Administrators suspended; temporary director assigned

By BRIAN P. MAULDWIN
Universe Staff Writer

The Timpanogos Community Mental Health Center's board of directors has appointed an interim administrative director while all seven of the center's administrators continue to be suspended with pay.

Keith D. Tintle, administrator of Utah Valley Regional Medical Center, agreed to be the Director of Operations at the Orem Mental Health Center pending the findings of a county and state audit to determine whether the suspended administrators are guilty of any wrongdoing.

Tintle will continue his administrative duties at UVRMC while assisting the center, said board chairman and county commissioner, Gary Anderson.

Anderson, along with Don R. Muller of the Utah State Division of Mental Health, approached UVRMC and its owner, Intermountain Health Care, for administrative assistance during this transitional period. IHC executives agreed to help Timp Mental Health at no cost to the county or state.

"We very much appreciate the help," said Anderson. "I know we can now continue the care and service (at Timp Mental Health) without interruption. I would like to add that it is gratifying to see this kind of cooperation between the private and public sectors."

All the center's administrators were suspended with pay April 5 following allegations of mismanagement and misuse of public funds.

Anderson said this action does not mean those suspended are guilty of any crime, and that the audit is needed to provide the board with an independent report.

The board of directors met Tuesday to evaluate the findings of the audit, but none of its members were available for comment.

"They're continuing the suspension of the Timp officers for another week until the audit is complete," said Cheri Murray of Commissioner Anderson's office.

OPINION

Consistent integrity can exist in world

At graduation, or any other significant time in our lives, we are usually inundated with speeches on the necessity to enter in the world with strong values and a determined effort to maintain those values. The importance of continuing our education and making a change in our world is often emphasized.

Regardless of whether it be positive or negative, the influence we make affects, in some small way, the outside world and those around us. A letter to the editor submitted by Kevin Allen of River Heights, Utah, said such "duty speeches" are often met with "great pessimism."

He wrote, " 'Learn to love learning' is something we often hear as we are sent out into the cruel world.

"As students, we have been conditioned by the majority of our educators that what matters in school is getting good grades. To get into graduate schools that have prestige, the student needs an outstanding GPA. The blame cannot rest entirely on our educators. The business world also facilitates this 'grades are everything' attitude. The best paying jobs usually go to the student with the highest grades.

UNIVERSE OPINION

"Is it any wonder that such instruction, at the end of four to eight years of intensive study is met with such objection? ... 'Learn how to love learning' does not top the list of why students are here. 'Learning is noble, but it doesn't pay the bills,' wrote Allen.

"However, there is another reality that many of us forget as we are crunched through this institution of 'higher education.' The reality is to exhibit moral integrity, our beliefs and actions must remain consistent. We cannot adopt the hedonistic attitude of the world, and hold to our basic beliefs of reaching out and caring for others at the same time.

"It is a fallacy that a person with moral integrity cannot exist in the outside world. To the contrary, the world is begging for morally praiseworthy people. As BYU graduates we can, and should, respond to the world's pleas for moral strength. When we realize that we are here to 'learn to love learning' so that we may improve our world, our education becomes just that — an education."

The Daily Universe couldn't have said it better.

Education has its fallacies but like in every facet of life, what matters is what we do with what we have, and the opportunities in such an environment are endless.

The above is the opinion of the Editorial Board of The Daily Universe which comprises the associate publisher, editor, opinion page editor, a teacher of opinion writing and a student staff member. Universe Opinions are not necessarily those of Brigham Young University, its administration or sponsoring church. The Editorial Board meetings are held every Monday and Thursday at 1 p.m in 541 ELWC. All meetings are open to the public.

Letter topics tabulated

One of the most interesting aspects of being editorial page editor is reading letters to the editor. Some offer substantive solutions to problems, some nice ones are gestures of well intentions and some are so bizarre one wonders if the letter writer slept well the previous night.

It's probably of no great surprise, but listed below are statistical results of the letters. Between Jan. 7 and April 14, The Daily Universe received a total of 381 letters to the editor (some were signed by more than one person).

Of those, 151 (40 percent) were published. Of those who submitted letters, 341 were male as opposed to 117 females (well below previous Daily Universe ratios).

Many of the letters submitted were in response to something published in The Daily Universe.

Of the 381 letters, 164 (43 percent) were in response to a letter, an editorial or an article.

Writers were most likely to respond to (in order of total number of responses):

Another letter: 116
Editorial: 14
Article from news pages: 28
Guest opinion: 6
Cartoon: 2
Advertisement: 1

The subject of greatest interest to letter writers were (total number of letters addressing a certain topic):

Martin Luther King Jr. holiday and Saturday school: 20
International affairs: 20
Basketball: 19
Basketball crowds: 18
In defense of either home town or country: 14
ASBYU, SSABYU, BYUSA and whatever-else-you-can-come-up-with restructuring procedure: 13
Campus junk food: 11
Mikhail Gorbachev and the Soviet Union: 10
Spandex running attire: 10
Dating practices: 9
Effective/ineffective library changes implemented to control the noise: 7
Snow clearing: 6

The international affairs included letters on Nicaragua, Honduras, South Africa, Israel, Sandinistas and Contras, and treaties between the United States and other nations.

The most notable trend I detect in BYU letter writers is the tendency to write a rebuttal to either a letter or an article and then write a rebuttal to that rebuttal.

Don't conform to the notion that BYU students are pacifist followers and come up with more original ideas.

Thanks to those double and triple time contributors.

Make decisions

Editor,

This being an election year, there has been plenty of discussion about political ideals and candidates. I'm not writing to promote my views; rather, I need to point out to all well-meaning citizens how they should make their decisions with regards to our government.

To be assured, there are definite right and wrong choices to be made in issues affecting the government of people. In every subject of this import, there are correct and incorrect decisions which can be made. This may seem simplistic, but it has nothing to do with the complexities of the world today. It has to do with truths concerning the governing of men.

One judges what actions should be taken by standards of principle. They are laid before us by those who have created the government which we pledge allegiance to. We know of the divine intervention in the creation of this nation and of the inspiration given to our founding fathers.

Therefore, we know exactly where to go to find the basic principles which we should use to form our decisions. Those who do not immediately accept that these men's words are truths may need to search the words of the highest authority to find that this is the case.

The situations today or facts of yesterday carry no weight in making judgments of this nature. All should be based upon sound principles we hold to be true. Of course, this requires quite a bit of research into the doctrines given us by those men. It is not difficult to see the truth and wisdom in their writings. As Americans, we should all make ourselves familiar enough with these fundamental ideas that we could make judgments in accordance with these basic principles.

Whatever you do in the political scene, do not use your influence to uplift laws or ideals which may be politically expedient at the time, or which may seem to be the right action for a specific situation. Also, do not rely on another man's ideas you have heard that may seem right. Make the correct resolution founded upon ideals already formulated.

Sell out?

Editor,

I would like to discuss two topics of world interest.

Terrorism. I believe there is only one way to deal with them, and that is to kill them. In Cyprus they once again show us how they work. You hijack an airplane because you want something, when you don't get it you start killing innocent people.

The United States should try to locate any terrorists and kill them before they try to kill innocent people. Some would say this is wrong. If a policeman is after someone and the person starts going for a gun, should he wait until he's shot at before he shoots him? No. Just like we should do to terrorists, kill them before they kill us.

Arms control. The big talk now is a 50 percent cut in long-range missiles. This would be OK if the United States had an equal number also. Do most Americans know the United States has 1,004 ICBMs and 650 SLBMs on 31 submarines, as stated in the SALT I agreement we signed?

The totals are 1,654 missiles to the United States and 2,448 missiles to the Soviet Union. Submarines are hard to find and in a war we will have twice as many to find. A 50 percent cut will give the United States 827 and the Soviet Union, 1,224.

I hope our leaders don't sell us out again like they have in the past.

Profanity on the rise

Editor,

As of late, I have become more aware of and disgusted by the use of profanity by the students on the BYU campus. I have especially noticed this in the Smith Fieldhouse and the Richards Building. I have heard these profane utterances from a wide range of people.

Joggers vent their irritation for having to move aside as a faster runner passes them on the inside of the indoor track. Guys in the locker room spew forth their feelings on that day's game.

People in the halls are told by their roommates what they can do with that evening's dinner if they don't like it (which, by the way, is not only profane, but also anatomically impossible).

President Spencer W. Kimball said that profanity is the result of an ignorant mind trying to express itself.

I pose the following question to those persons who insist on proving to the rest of us their ignorance and inability to accurately express their feelings: How can you enter a continuing ecclesiastical endorsement interview and tell your ecclesiastical leader that you have read, understood and will follow the Honor Code of BYU, knowing that you are lying?

Show moral courage

Editor,

Last week, an Israeli girl was killed in the village of Beita, in the occupied territory of the West Bank. The Israelis have stoned her to death. Israeli settlers rampaged through the village, and the Israeli army began shooting Arabs in the area.

Even after an autopsy showed the teen-ager had been shot by her own bodyguard, the army moved through Beita with explosives, methodically destroying the homes of many of the Arabs who live there.

It's strange that the Israelis get away with such actions. After burying people alive, torturing prisoners to death, and committing other atrocities reminiscent of Nazi activities, they still claim that the Palestinians are the mad terrorists, and that the Israeli actions are justifiable.

I have difficulty understanding how it is that the Israelis can drive the Palestinians from their land, bomb their refugee camps, and they claim with any credibility that those Palestinians who fight back are the problem, instead of the Israelis (who started the conflict and do much more of the killing).

The fact that the Israelis view Palestine as their ancestral home does not excuse their barbarity.

Many of our tax dollars go to support Israel, which means that we share complicity in Israel's barbarism. We should not be a party to this. It is time for our government to show some moral courage and make U.S. aid to Israel contingent upon Israeli negotiations with the Palestinian's own representatives, in order to return a part of Palestine to the Palestinians.

The only way the Israelis will find peace is through either completely destroying the Palestinians and their supporters, or by dealing justly with them.

We should insist that our political leaders require Israel to abandon the strategy of peace through genocide and pursue peace through justice, before they get more U.S. aid.

No show-and-tell

Editor,

This is just a quick reply to Camille and Cori about the Redford forum. I've got to admit that their remarks blew me away, in that they were expressed with such authoritative surety, yet evidently originated in minds accustomed to criticizing while standing on the outside looking in.

As coordinator of the event, I really don't remember sitting next to you in Redford's office while we planned everything that was to happen. If you were there, then maybe you'll check your notes to find where its says "intimate audience, 500 max." You see, this wasn't meant to be a show-and-tell. That's why it was advertised so quietly.

If you had been there to hear ideas as well as to see his face, then you would have realized that he thought it was a total success. I won't even mention the hundred or so flashes that went off when he walked in . Tremendous audience etiquette.

You also maybe didn't notice that 600 people came in after 3:10 p.m. Faulty organization, or irresponsibility on your part?

Room-wise, the Madsen Recital Hall was the perfect location for the lecture's goal — to communicate sensitive and sound ideas on a person-to-person level. Bob wanted to see your eyes and speak as if person to person. A room any larger would have depleted the impact of his personality and destroyed any chance at intimate exchange.

Schedule-wise, Bob took two hours out of a busy day with guest from Russia to come down. He had to be back at Sundance at 4:30 p.m., so though he said he would have loved to stay, technically, his own schedule didn't allow it.

Thanks again for your well-thought-out remarks, and if you have any more questions, please keep them to yourself.

Regional driving competition offers a $5,000 scholarship

By ADILSON PARRELLA
Universe Staff Writer

The winner of a regional driving competition hosted by BYU will receive an all-expense-paid trip to Daytona Beach, Fla., to compete at the national level, said a BYU associate professor of industrial education and the regional competition coordinator.

"The winner of the Grand Finals at Daytona International Speedway will get a $5,000 scholarship and will get a Dodge Daytona Turbo Z to drive for a year," said Ronald F. Gonzales.

Gonzales said the competition at BYU — April 27-29 from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. — will consist of driving a Dodge Daytona Turbo Z locked in first gear in a precision driving course which will be set up on the west side of the BYU football stadium parking lot.

"The competition is mainly based on hand reactions and good sight," said Gonzales. "To drive the course is fun, but to win it takes skill."

According to Gonzales, the competition will be sponsored by the Dodge Division of Chrysler Motors and Goodyear Tire Co. All licensed drivers 18 years of age and older can sign up during the event and participate.

Jay Ballard, a senior from Freemont, Calif., majoring in industrial education and a participant in last year's competition, said everyone gets a practice lap before the official lap and the competition is a fight against the clock. "Also, during the competition, you lose one second for each cone you hit," he said.

National Dispatchers week

BYU honored for outstanding work

By BRENT HALES
Universe Staff Writer

As part of National Dispatchers week, BYU dispatchers for the University Police will be recognized for their outstanding work, said the head dispatcher at BYU.

"At BYU we have four nominees for the dispatcher of the year and … one person from each agency, including BYU, who will be honored at a banquet for all dispatchers in the state of Utah," said Michelle Hopkins, records and communications supervisor at the University Police.

"Dispatchers Week is to honor dispatchers and make the public aware that we are the key to getting help," said Hopkins.

BYU is a little unique in that the dispatchers deal with the campus, which is a city of its own, she said.

BYU dispatchers have the responsibility of relaying any type of information, emergency or non-emergency, throughout the campus, said Hopkins.

"The dispatcher is the key to communications for any kind of emergency … to get help or whatever kind of assistance is needed," she said.

One example, said Hopkins, was the armed robbery at the BYU Bookstore on April 1.

"The dispatcher handled the situation very, very well," she said. "The girl on the phone that reported it broke down … but the dispatcher was able to get the information and relay it to the necessary people."

Many times the person reporting an incident will get "hysterical" and say, "just send help," said Hopkins. "We need to know what the problem is so we can send the right kind of help."

BYU dispatchers have all been EMD (Emergency Medical Dispatcher) trained, said Hopkins. "We have been trained in CPR and how to give CPR instructions over the phone … this has saved many, many lives," she said.

BYU does not have a lot of emergency situations, said Hopkins.

"But there was one incident about one or two years ago with a stand-by electrician … he went to an electrical box and it exploded in his face," she said. "Luckily his son rushed him to a shower and washed his face off."

According to Hokins, BYU has one of the most extensive chemical programs in the state.

Another unique aspect about BYU is the emergency phones on campus, said Hopkins.

Liz Taylor returns endangered gift

Associated Press

BANGKOK, Thailand — Actress Elizabeth Taylor loved the baby gibbon and monkey that publisher Malcolm Forbes gave her during their three days in Bangkok, but she left them behind because they were endangered species, a U.S. offical said Wednesday.

Ross Petzing, spokesman of the American Embassy in Bangkok, said the apes were being cared for by an employee of the Oriental Hotel, where Ms. Taylor and Forbes stayed before leaving for Tokyo on Tuesday night.

The two were here on a private visit.

Petzing said he didn't know where Forbes, the millionaire publisher of Forbes magazine, got the animals. The gift had drawn criticism from wildlife conservationists.

Celebrity elected mayor of Palm Springs Bono promises more growth in tourism

Associated Press

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Sonny Bono, who easily won the mayor's office of this desert resort, says his fame as Cher's ex-husband and former singing partner was both an asset and a handicap during his campaign.

"I think the celebrity status got me a lot of name identification," said Bono, age 53.

After Tuesday's victory, Bono said it was hard to overcome his image as "a straight man for Cher" — who won her first Academy Award last Monday night.

"At first, he was viewed as a joke. But then he got out and started talking to folks and became a legitimate and very popular candidate," said Rebecca Kurtz, managing editor of Palm Springs Life magazine.

Bono, a restaurateur and the state's newest celebrity mayor, won by almost a 2-1 margin, with 4,842 votes to 2,498 for accountant Lloyd Maryanov, his closest competitor in the field of seven, city officials said.

In coastal Carmel, where actor Clint Eastwood decided against a second, two-year term as mayor, voters elected community activist Jean Grace to succeed him.

Grace, who received Eastwood's endorsement, got 1,144 votes. Her chief challenger, Clayton Anderson, got 868 votes.

Bono will serve a four-year term with an annual salary of $15,000.

During his campaign, Bono said he would draw tourists back through carefully planned events.

One proposal suggested by Bono included a film festival and several concerts.

Bono rose to fame with Cher, singing such songs as "I've Got You Babe" and "The Beat Goes On."

Cher went on to a Hollywood career, and on Monday won the best actress Oscar for her role in "Moonstruck."

Soviet reporter disappointed

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — A Soviet reporter was barred from this gambling and entertainment capital for 16 years because of nearby military installations and the nuclear test site. Now that he's seen it, he's less than impressed.

The lights on the Las Vegas Strip are so bright "you can read a newspaper at 3 a.m. — that is, provided you don't care if people take you for an idiot," Vitaly Gan, a correspondent for the Communist Party newspaper Pravda, wrote in a profile published Monday in the Los Angeles Times and Las Vegas Review-Journal.

He referred to the city's slot machines as "one-legged bandits."

He described the Strip as "an orgy of buildings, arches, fountains, statues and ads, striking the eye with the abandon and wanton nature of the merry-making going on there.

"All this rolls before your eyes in a searing ball of fire, 24 hours a day."

"People know that gambling is one of the silliest inventions of mankind," Gan said

A regular one-man band

Student seeks stardom

By JOHN RENFROW
Special to the Universe

A student at BYU has plans to become a legendary pop-rock star. Troy Sales, 22, a sophomore from Kansas City, Mo., majoring in broadcasting, has already recorded three of his own songs, and he has not limited himself to just one instrument.

Sales plays and records every instrument himself, and with sophisticated sound recording equipment, he can make his songs sound professionally recorded.

"The thing that I would like the most is to be a studio musician where my music can be known through videos and a few shows every now and then," Sales said.

After playing in several bands, and recording many "rough cuts" of songs he had written, Sales has gone out on his own to make money from his "artistic" songs.

"I'm into it for the music and the message, a good positive message. I want to put some ideas in people's minds that would help them out," Sales said.

After playing at talent shows, youth conferences and jam sessions in his basement for the last four years, Sales has grown to love being on stage.

He says it's the energy with the fans and fellow musicians that makes him want to play his music, but one thing he doesn't want to do is a lot of touring.

"It's hard to be a rock star and have a family," said Sales. "It's the traveling, it's more time consuming. I can spend more time with the family when I'm doing videos."

Recently married to Larana Coulson, a junior from Laporte City, Iowa, majoring in business management, Sales says his new wife supports him.

"I think it's great," said his wife. "I really admire people that go after their goals."

She went on to say that when they first met, she felt sorry for whoever would become his wife because of the career he was choosing. She felt it would definitely have an adverse effect on his family.

Now she says she keeps on reminding him, "The family's more important, and he's really good about it."

Sales said he got started in music by listening to his mother play the piano.

He learned some "little" songs himself, and when he began the third grade, his mother encouraged him to take piano lessons.

"I hated it," Sales said. "I didn't want to be limited to what the book told me to do. I wanted to have fun with music."

At the age of 15, Sales began copying entire pop-rock songs off the radio on the piano.

Sales finally decided the piano just didn't give him the sound those electric guitars and synthesizers did, so he bought his own synthesizer and electric guitar.

Just before his mission to the Utah Salt Lake City North Mission, he started his own band entitled "SABRE," which later translated by another band member into "S.A.B.R.E. (Saints At Battle for Righteous Entertainment)."

The band has since broke up but Sales says he still keeps the "righteous entertainment" part of it alive in his music.

"My way is to surround myself with people with high morals," Sales said. "There is a lot of low moral people in the music business, but so are there in any business."

"Bands that did music like that (trying to play moral popular music, but having failed) did it for the words rather than the music," Sales said. "It has to have that magical touch. When you hear it, you have to want to sing it over and over again."

Sales said he starts out with the music first. Then, he adds words to match the music.

"Start with music, then words."

The first thing Sales said he plans to do is finish school.

He wants to learn, and get some hands-on experience in writing and recording songs.

He wants to develop some connections with dominant people in the music business.

Sales says, "The whole system is designed to throw a curve. You have to know the system."

Connections are one of the most important things according to Sales. Connections will "get him in."

The biggest advice that could be given to someone wanting to get into the music business, according to Sales, would be: "You have to be determined enough to keep getting up again, and practice your socks off!"

The importance of rising everytime you fall, Sales said, is one of the biggest lessons he has learned.

He says the music business is full of obstacles, and you have to be tough to be able to survive until you've reached your dream.

Banquet honors Cougar athletes

Eleven BYU athletes were recognized for outstanding performance on and off the field of play at Wednesday night's Cougar Club Annual Banquet.

The banquet, held in BYU's Wilkinson Center Ballroom, also recognized retiring track coach, Clarence "Robby" Robison for his years of devoted service to BYU athletics.

Steve Young, former BYU quarterback and now backup quarterback with the NFL's San Francisco 49ers, gave the keynote address to those in attendance.

The Dale Rex Award, presented annually to the person who "has contributed the most to amateur athletics in the state of Utah," was given to Jeff Chatman, the Cougars' outstanding basketball player.

In his career, Chatman hit more than 54 percent of his shots from the field, and has been named to the All-Cougar Classic and the NCAA All-District Seven teams for three straight years.

Among his personal bests on the court were a 30-point game and an 18-rebound game. He was selected by ESPN and Dick Vitale as national Windex Player of the Week for his performance on the road against UTEP and New Mexico in January.

He ends his playing career as BYU's fourth-best scorer, with more than 1,700 points.

Also recognized at the banquet were Susanna Lee Noot (tennis) and Brian Taylor (basketball), recipients of the Crowd Pleaser Award; Jill Sanders Plumb (volleyball) and Jim Usevitch (basketball), Competitor Award; Maikki Salmi (volleyball), Outstanding Senior, Women; Mike Willes (baseball), Ed Stein Award; Lori Cragun (gymnastics) Kimball Memorial Award; Michael Smith (basketball), Cougar Club Memorial Award; and Stephanie Peery Packham (track) and Bruce Brockbank (golf), Dale R. McCann Team Spirit Award.

UCLA coach not first choice

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Jim Harrick was introduced as UCLA's new head basketball coach Tuesday and said he didn't care about not being the Bruins' first choice for the job.

"Did you know that John Wooden was the fourth choice at UCLA? I'm serious," Harrick said at a packed campus news conference, referring to the legendary coach who led the Bruins to 10 NCAA championships in 12 years before retiring in 1975.

Harrick, a former UCLA assistant who was the head coach at Pepperdine the past nine seasons, was hired 13 days after Walt Hazzard, who had held the job for four years, was dismissed.

Since Hazzard's firing, several big-name coaches were interviewed by UCLA amidst much hoopla. Among them were North Carolina State's Jim Valvano and Kansas' Larry Brown, who was offered the job last Thursday night and accepted it, but changed his mind the next day, deciding to stay with national champion Kansas.

BYU shortstop Gary Schoonover attempts to tag out SUSC outfielder Tim Chambers on an attempt to steal second base during the second game of a double header played at BYU. Chambers was called out and the Cougars moved their record to 24-9 on the season after splitting the double header. SUSC took the first game 9-4 and BYU won the second 12-6.

Sluggers split two with SUSC

Batina slams three homers as Cougars move record to 24-9

By BRADY BINGHAM
Universe Sports Writer

BYU first baseman John Batina hit three home runs on the day en route to lifting the Cougars to a split with Southern Utah State College Wednesday afternoon, 4-9 and 12-6.

Under clear skies and near eighty degree weather, the Cougars took to the field to play their sixth and seventh games in just six days in hopes to increase their winning steak to four games. The Cougars had also won 11 of 12 going in to Wednesday.

However in the opener, BYU batters were quiet and starting pitcher John Sinclair gave up the big inning that SUSC needed to take the game.

In the second inning, Sinclair gave up seven runs on eight hits as the Thunderbirds sent 11 men to the plate. Sinclair then gave up two more runs in the third as SUSC jumped out to a 9-1 lead.

"Sometimes a pitcher goes out there and just doesn't have his best stuff," said head coach Gary Pullins of his ace starter (Sinclair was 5-0 before today). "I believe this was the case today for John."

The Cougar batters, who average over 11 runs per game, were also very quiet in the first game, managing only four runs and just five hits.

"I was a little disappointed after the first game," said Pullins. "our offense didn't generate anything and we couldn't put some hits together."

Pullins also gave credit to SUSC starter Ron Burrus for shutting down the Cougar hitters.

Of the four Cougar runs, two came from homeruns by shortstop Gary Schoonover, his eighth of the season, and Batina, his first of the day and 13th of the season.

In the second game, the tides turned for BYU as the Cougar offense struck for 12 runs on 13 hits including four homeruns.

The Cougar offense was lead by Batina who hit his 14th and 15th roundtrippers of the season and nearly hit his third of the game when he flew to deep center in the bottom of the fifth.

"In my last at bat I hit the ball pretty well but I just got underneath it," said Batina. "It would have been nice to get the third."

Batina was rested on Monday's game against Utah before returning to the lineup Wednesday.

"Basically I'm ready to play every day I'm at the ballpark, but I guess the rest helped today," said Batina.

The Cougars had fallen behind in the first inning when starter Ed Zinter gave up a three-run homer to SUSC rightfielder Bill Robertson.

But BYU struck right back when homerun leader Mike Willes hit his 22nd homerun of the season over the left field fence. The homerun put Willes just nine back of his own WAC record of 31 and 16 back of the NCAA record of 48 by Pete Incaviglia of Oklahoma State.

Willes went 3-4 on the day and drove in four runs, matching the four RBI's by Batina to lead the Cougars.

BYU right fielder Bruce Ellis padded the Cougar lead in the sixth with a two-run homer that ended up in the Marriott Center parking lot. The homer was the 10th on the year for Ellis.

BYU is now 24-9 and will have the rest of the week off for finals before returning to the field next Wednesday to start a four game series with Colorado State in Ft. Collins, Colo.

Cardinals off to 'anemic' beginning

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Shortstop Ozzie Smith says anyone whose car has ever putt-putted down the highway or stalled at a traffic light should have a good idea why the St. Louis Cardinals are off to such a poor start.

"It's like a car firing; you have to have all your sparkplugs working together," Smith said.

On the Cardinals, the sparkplugs are not firing and the club is 1-5, its worst opening in 15 years. Not at all becoming for the defending National League champion.

A team batting average of .198 has produced only 2.1 runs a game. The top three batters in the lineup, who are supposed to trigger an offense that relies far more on speed than power, are hitting a collective .151.

Vince Coleman, the leadoff who at this time a year ago had the Cardinals scoring at a 5.5 runs-per-game pace, is batting .107. Smith isn't much better at .174, and Tommy Herr is at .182.

"I think your leadoff hitter has to be the catalyst for any ballclub. To this point, (Coleman) hasn't really gotten into a groove. It's a team. Everybody has something to do," Smith said.

So feeble were the Cardinals during Monday night's 6-1 loss to the Chicago Cubs that Manager Whitey Herzog could only ponder possible solutions.

"We just have to get on base more. There's not much margin for error," Herzog said. "I could take the same guys and juggle them up, but I don't know if that's going to do anything."

The batting anemia is affecting almost everyone. Bob Horner, the former Atlanta Braves slugger St. Louis signed as a free agent in January, has a respectable .273 batting mark — as does Terry Pendleton, the lineup's No. 6 hitter.

But Willie McGee, the No. 5 hitter, is hitting .176. The club, traditionally last in NL home runs in part because of its spacious home park, had hit only two in six games — one of them by pitcher Joe Magrane.

SALAMANDER
THE STORY OF THE MORMON FORGERY MURDERS
BY LINDA SILLITOE AND ALLEN D. ROBERTS

"Linda Sillitoe and Allen Roberts have written an investigative masterpiece. Because of their intimate ties with Utah's unique culture, this grim mystery unfolds from the inside out, keeping the reader enthralled from beginning to end."
— Peter Wiley, co-author of America's Saints: The Rise of Mormon Power

"Salamander is a triumph of the classic art of compelling storytelling. To properly plumb the tragic dimensions of this case, one needs the tenacity of an investigative reporter, the imagination of a novelist, the sensitivity of a poet, and the thoroughness of a historian. Together, Sillitoe and Roberts are all of these. They have done exceptional legwork, both in the halls of justice and in the portals of the past."
— Paul Swenson, Utah Holiday magazine

"Deep beneath the majestic Utah mountains, with its 'God-driven snow' and fervent religion, lie the murder, forgery, and greed skillfully captured in Sillitoe's and Roberts's exciting new book."
— Melvin M. Belli, Sr., author of My Life on Trial

"Thorough and compelling, Salamander: The Story of the Mormon Forgery Murders reveals a sad parable of the treacherous web of deceit that unfolds when a people refuse to deal honestly with their own history. Surely no one can be proud of his or her role in this tragic drama except for those, like the authors, who have sought out the truth."
— Carl Arrington, People magazine

"Salamander: The Story of the Mormon Forgery Murders is a meticulous re-creation of the Mark Hofmann years in Salt Lake City. The authors tell their story with great attention to the intimate details of the host of Hofmann's frauds."
— Robert A. Jones, Los Angeles Times

"As a superb analysis and interpretation of these events, anyone who wants a better understanding of the range of human motivations, the limitations of verifying documents, and the need for caution in following the advice of promoters who claim close association with church officials ought to read Salamander."
— Thomas G. Alexander, author of Mormonism in Transition: A History of the Latter-day Saints, 1890-1930

Congressman supports treaty change

By ADAM J. HUNT
Universe Staff Writer

Declaring that the importance of the Panama Canal cannot be overstated, Utah Congressman Howard Nielson is cosponsoring legislation to renegotiate the Panama Canal Treaty.

Claiming Panama is not honoring its side of the treaty, Nielson said it is time to review the treaty.

He blamed Panamanian leader Gen. Manuel Noriega for threatening the safety of the canal and its U.S. employees.

"We've had a lot of problems in Panama. Part of it is the fact that it's become a drug-running ring. Part of it is the fact that we don't think the Panamanian government is honoring its side of the agreement," he said.

"Noriega has already tried to get President Devalle to evict U.S. troops now stationed to protect the canal.

Also, canal workers have been intimidated and detained by Noriega's soldiers, impairing the smooth operation of the canal."

Complete control of the Panama Canal is scheduled to be turned over to Panama in the year 2000. Because of the country's volatile situation, Nielson said the proposed legislation is important because it would permit independent U.S. action to defend the canal if necessary.

"Currently, any military protection of the canal must be a cooperative effort on the part of both the United States and Panama. But with the unstable situation and the unrest surrounding Noriega, U.S. interests in the (Panama) Canal Zone are at great risk," Nielson said.

The congressman pointed out that the legislation does not call for a change in existing arrangements for ownership and operation of the canal. But he said it does call for the United States to secure the means to act decisively in defending the canal. "The treaty is a treaty. Frankly, I don't believe in changing horses in the middle of the stream or reneging on a promise," he said.

"But if one side is not keeping its agreement, then maybe we ought to go back and take another look at it and maybe come up with a new agreement we can both get by on."

Nielson said the legislation, which was introduced in the House of Representatives last week, already has 50-60 cosponsors. He said the legislation would work in conjunction with the economic and diplomatic sanctions already imposed against the Noriega regime.
